DETAILED ACTION

Election/Restrictions

Restriction to one of the following inventions is required under 35 U.S.C. 121:

- I. Claims 1-51, 76 and 77 drawn to a method of using a physical layout system, classified in class 716, subclass 8.
- II. Claims 52-69, 79 and 80 drawn to a method of analyzing a physical layout circuit design, classified in class 717, subclass 110.
- III. Claims 70-75, 78, drawn to a physical layout system, classified in class 716, subclass 11.

The inventions are distinct, each from the other because of the following reasons:

Inventions III and I are related as product and process of use. The inventions can be shown to be distinct if either or both of the following can be shown: (1) the process for using the product as claimed can be practiced with another materially different product or (2) the product as claimed can be used in a materially different process of using that product (MPEP § 806.05(h)). In the instant case, the process in Group I for using the product as claimed in Group III, can practiced with another product with a macro network or floppy hard drive, etc. instead of a library module in Group III for retrieving information associated with the micro-fluidic components. And the product in Group III does not need to use any multi-layered component as required in Group I.

Inventions III and II are related as product and process of use. The inventions can be shown to be distinct if either or both of the following can be shown: (1) the process for using the product as claimed can be practiced with another materially different product or (2) the product as claimed can be used in a materially different process of using that product (MPEP § 806.05(h)). In the instant case, the process in Group II for using the product as claimed in Group III, can practiced with another product with a macro network or physical layout, etc. instead of a library module in Group III for retrieving information associated with the micro-fluidic components. And the product in Group III can retrieve all the information and data from the library module or software rather than the method of extracting information from the physical layout or writing the physical layout to a layout file specified in Group II.

Inventions I and II are unrelated. Inventions are unrelated if it can be shown that they are not disclosed as capable of use together and they have different modes of operation, different functions, or different effects (MPEP § 806.04, MPEP § 808.01). In the instant case the different inventions I and II depict totally two different concepts. Group I discloses a method of using a physical layout system by placing and connecting a plurality of micro-fluid, multi-layered components to channels. On the other hand, Group II discloses a method of using the micro-fluid circuit comprising a plurality of functional steps, such as extracting information, simulating physical layout, synthesizing software, writing layout, etc. Group I does not comprise any functional steps at all as described in Group II. Also, Group II excludes any placing and connecting steps as shown in Group I. Therefore, they are not capable of use together and have different modes of operation.

Art Unit: 2821

Because these inventions are distinct for the reasons given above and have acquired a separate status in the art because of their recognized divergent subject matter, restriction for examination purposes as indicated is proper.

Applicant is advised that the reply to this requirement to be complete must include an election of the invention to be examined even though the requirement be traversed (37 CFR 1.143).
